

Greetings. My name is Jake Scott Heller, but I have the feeling that we will soon be very close friends so it is okay with me if you call me by my nickname, Jake Heller The Science Feller. If you are the slightest bit intelligent then my nickname should tell you that I am a scientist. My scientific interests include quantum physics, advanced string theory, particle physics, relativity, and hydrology. Usually I spend my weekends in my laboratory either reacting various amounts of sodium hydroxide and ammonia or searching for super novae through my seventeen inch telescope. While not indulging myself in the various pleasures that science can provide a body, I enjoy crafting novels on science fiction, weaving tales of scholarly young men using their knowledge to attract young maidens, and creating life like paintings of animals such as horses and cows.
