

“Theres beuty in the struggle, ugliness in the success” ~ J. cole

Growing up my mom and i were always broke, we never had any money. she would take me to my grandmas house so she could babysit me and my mom went to work. now we live with my dad, but we still struggle by. We’re always looking for ways to save but we always end up for alot more expenses.

though we sometimes struggle we’re still very happy because we have each other. We have each other for support, we have each other for comfort, we have each other for everything. And we might be happier than someone with alot of money and alot of material things but they will always want more, they will never truly be happy because they will always think that they can get more than what they have. all the material things cannot bring someone material happiness.
